About This Series

In Matthew 28, Jesus instructed us to make disciples, teaching them to observe all that he has commanded. In doing so, he was asking them, as well as us, to remember what he taught and to carry it on long after he had ascended to the Father. He asked us to carry on his legacy.

Legacy ties us to something that has already been happening and going on, something in the past – given to us. Legacy also moves us forward, to look to the future, and challenges us to ask, “What are we leaving behind for those who come after us?”

For decades, Fellowship Church has placed a high value on worshipping God and seeking to worship God in the way in which he has asked us. As a church, our mission is to make disciples who make disciples and who display the glory of the Lord Jesus Christ in every phase of their lives. We accomplish this through our vision of being a worshipping, growing, and serving body of believers. This is the legacy that we desire to carry on to the next generation. By leaving a legacy of worship and disciple-making behind us, we are fulfilling Christ’s command to teach others to observe all that Christ has commanded us.

Today I will begin a series, A Legacy of Worship, to coincide with our ministry campaign. In this series, we will be looking at the biblical foundation for the campaign. I believe that we have an opportunity to be part of God’s mission and vision for our church for today as well as for the future generations of this church. It should be our desire for more people to hear the gospel, to worship God, to grow in Christ, and to serve him. It is my hope that this series will encourage you to commit to this vision as part of the legacy that we will leave behind us.
